GREAT 2 KNOW!!!

It helped me realise all the things I did wrong in past research projects. I had always wondered what the "Get it" link was for. I wish I had this video when I was in first year.

Last semester for two of my essays we had to have peer reviewed essays. I had trouble searching and narrowing down what I wanted, and the correct time frame. This video helped me understand what I am searching for and how easy it is to use a peer reviewed article.

I had no idea that there was a librarian for every program at Brock.

This helps so much for my research for my masters major research paper!

I did know about how to find books through Brock library website but I didn't know about electronic resource thing...thanks for that :):):)

I always wondered how to get rid of the newspaper and magazine articles. This will assist a lot in saving time searching.

Now I can write papers and not have to cite wikipedia!!!! :D

It was useful for realizing the larger context that books can give for a research subject.

I was always exhausted rooting through all the Googling that was from non-academic sources. Always plastered with ideas from people without any academic backing. Now with this new tool, I will write with more authority in my sources.

This helped me because I did not know that the request icon is a request to be notified once the book has been returned.

Questions? Contact Monica Rettig, Liaison Librarian mrettig@brocku.ca

I will definitely use the information in this video when I research my next paper.

Reviving Arthur: Tennyson's Idylls of the King

Welcome to students in Dr. Ann Howey's English 4V35 course. I have created this tutorial to assist you in research on Alfred Tennyson. The topics include:

- starting points for research
- finding literary criticism on Tennyson
- learning more about the Victorian context of Tennyson's poetry

1. starting points for research

If you have one good article, you have a great start! Find the full-text and check out the bibliography for additional sources. You will need to:

a) determine what type of resource it is (book, chapter, article)

b) search by journal title/title in the library catalogue to find out if the Brock Library has the resource

2. Finding literary criticism on Lord Alfred Tennyson

Literary criticism is different from a modern review of a poem, play, or novel (such as the kind you can find in the weekend newspaper). Literary criticism may take the form of books, book chapters, or journal articles.

You can find books on Tennyson through the library catalogue, through our e-book collections, and in the English literature databases. Good databases to try are:

- MLA International Bibliography
- Literature Online (LION)
- Project Muse
- JSTOR
